TRUEPHONE No. 12.

Hongkong, March 24th, 1888.

Elegater months ago a roving Commission was dispatched to investigate and reporupon the condition of Chinese emigrants in the countries to which they have gone. paternal care for the welfare of the subjects of the Emperor abroad was the supposed motive for the appointment of the Commission. In his recent memorial to the Throne on the subject the Viceroy Chang Chin-Tung states the motive very explicitly. He had, in conjunction with the Minister Chung YIN-YUAN, submitted a memorial with reference to a plan " to raise funds at the different foreign ports where Chinese are congregated, for the purpose of constructing ships of-war to protect our subjects abroad, and the Commission was appointed "to make careful investigations into the question of establishing Chinese Consulates, and raising funds for war-ship construction.". The Commussion has now that its report and the Vicerov in commenting on it in his memorial enve amonest other things that " in the port of Manila the Chinese merchants are both willing and able to support a Consular officer, and that for the first year only will it be necessary for the Government to advance bny funds, and this will be repaid at the end of the year out of the fees collected. From the second year onwards no demand need be desirable to recognise a Chinese Consul. made on the national funds, but all the working expenses of the consulate, including to the establishment of Consulates on the the salaries of the officers, will be defrayed out of the fees. Should there be a surplus balance of the fees, it can be reserved as a spare fund for the construction of war-ships, ment of Cousuls be allowed at all, it should to be specially used for the protection of our subjects abroad." The establishment of Consulates at other places is recommended, but Manila is the place to which attention is more Consuls have been appointed, but they are particularly directed. Doubtless Chang Chin-TUNG has to some extent been influenced by honest concern for the welfare of his conntrymen abroad, but a more immediate Chin-rung shows what he considers the tired list. actuating motive for the recommendations he has made is, we suspect, a desire to make the Chinese abroad contribute to the Chinese revenue. They are to be invited to pay fees, that the numerous Chinese in foreign parts out of which in the first place the expenses of the Consulate will be defrayed, and the balance is to be used for building men-ofwar. The fees are to be derived from " rethe Chinese see that Foreigners in China have to register themselves at their respective consulates, and have to pay a fee on doing so, it is not very surprising that in a proposal to establish Chineso consulates abroad this means of raising a revenue should be seized on with avidity. It is so 29th inst, at 9 p.m. convenient, so simple! The fee may be fixed at any amount, or varied according to railway has, the Courrier d'Haiphong says, been The exigencies of the situation, and suitable distinctions may be made between the Chinese equivalents of our terms "Gentleman" mention. In the case of foreigners in China the registration fee is objected to on principle, but in practice the exaction is so triffing that the grievance hardly ranks ing the proposed movements of the Company's above a sentimental one. In the case of a steamers during 1888 on the routes from England squeezing nation like the Chinese, however, it is to be feared it would be fur otherwise. The right usages are now so well known that new comers who succeeded old servants of China abroad get, behaviour to be observed, the traditions of intercourse, and the penalties for misconduct; that, practically, all goes well." our contemporary can suppose the objections which have been unged to the appointment of Chinese Consuls have disappeared it is difficult to imagine, in face of the avowed intention to use the Consulates as machines for the collection of taxes for the support of the Navy. We have, moreever, the case which occurred at Singapore during the Pranco-Chinese war, when an attempt was made to levy through the Consul a contribution from the Chinese in the Straits Settlements. The matter was con- | thorities always sit in state while the envoys are sidered of sufficient importance to call for a formal remonstrance from the Straits Government. If the Chinese abroad were subjected to a Consular registration for there would be practically no limit to the exictions they would have to pay. There is, however, another view of the matter. Chang Chin-tung takes his stand on a question of right, and puts forward the argument "that in conformity with the provisions of international law, whenever a state | nominees, for which there are six prizes. is privileged to accredit a diplomatic representative to the court of another independent state, she can also send Consular officers to the different ports of the same state.' The subject is not a new one, but this does not detruct from the value or interest of the present volume. Few-branches of Biblical science have received a larger share of attorition than that which re lates to Scripture botany, yet there are still many problems to solve, and much may be expected from the modern study of plants in Eastern lands, together with their names, geographical distribution, and uses. Too many of the works which might be helpful to the student are beyoud the reach of a limited purse, and on this account the R. T. S. deserves the thanks of all who are interested in Bible studies for placing such accurate and useful manuals within the reach of the humblest worker in Nature's Vineyard. At the hat annual general meeting my predecess: rin the chair took the opportunity to express cheerful hopes with regard to the favourable development of the Company's affairs, and it is with so much more regret, as clearly pointed out in the report, that the Directors have to announce the heavy losses that have arisen out of the winding up of the working account of 1886. The losses n 1887. I regret to say, have likewise been pretty heavy, as you will see in the accounts, but it may be hoped that the final winding up may be better. However, it must not be overlooked, that the period under review has been a very trying one to many Marine Insurance Offices, owing, in the first place, to an extremely keen competition at reduced rates, and secondly, to an exceptionally great number of disasters and consequent heavy losses. The steamer Sea Gull. of which this Company owned about one third, was lisposed of in January of this year, and the balance, as shown in the report, represents the net proceeds realized.
